TSC's Revolving Door Sessions are a series of monthly jam sessions held in the downstairs lounge of Patrick Ryan's Bar in Harlem, NYC. The Seven Collective aims to facilitate a vibrant playing space where emerging and established artists of various genres can step out of their respective comfort zones, commune with diverse peoples and styles of expression and produce radical works of art. This series of jam sessions serves as an experimentation of creative growth. We aspire to expand the artist's limited notions of self, craft, impact and community.

We welcome actors, dancers, vocalists, emcees, poets, comedians, painters, sculptors, clowns and those who have a burning desire to do something. This is a playpen where you can work alone or collaborate with others, rehearse for a time leading up to the event or try something new on the night of the event.

The challenge is to stretch your boundaries, share an unseen aspect of yourself through your work, embrace the possibility of falling on your face and be emboldened by that very same possibility.

About The Seven Collective:

Seven free thinking, creative forces united in the spirit of artistic fellowship with an agenda to shake up the Theatre establishment. The Seven Collective is a multi-media, multi-functional theatre collective dedicated to the global advancement of the arts through groundbreaking performance, education and outreach. TSC's vision is to revolutionize theatre into a social movement capable of articulating global commonalities, demolishing ignorance-driven intolerance and truly putting life on the stage.
